

Elementary Principals Council – 3/17/16

“What students show us is really all they know. It’s up to us – the adults in their lives – to offer an array of appropriate, alternative means for them to regulate their emotions and manage the intensity of their behaviors. To do so, we must provide a safe environment in which students are free to explore those strategies, practice them, and discover the ones that work best for them” (Souers, with Hall, 2016).

Essential Questions:

- How do we effectively lead our schools in creating the best possible learning environment for all students?

Intended Outcomes: Participants will be able to

- Engage in collegial conversation and network with their peers.
- Identify possible ways to network with community opportunities.
- Explain the principles grounding the direction and work of School Improvement Services.
- Help each other problem-solve.
